REAFFIRMATION ACT

JANUARY 11, 2018.—Committed to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union and ordered to be printed

Mr. BISHOP of Utah, from the Committee on Natural Resources, submitted the following

R E P O R T

[To accompany H.R. 1532]

[Including cost estimate of the Congressional Budget Office]

The Committee on Natural Resources, to whom was referred the bill (H.R. 1532) to reaffirm that certain land has been taken into trust for the benefit of the Poarch Band of Creek Indians, and for other purposes, having considered the same, report favorably thereon without amendment and recommend that the bill do pass.

PURPOSE OF THE BILL

The purpose of H.R. 1532 is to reaffirm that certain land has been taken into trust for the benefit of the Poarch Band of Creek Indians.

BACKGROUND AND NEED FOR LEGISLATION

H.R. 1532 would “reaffirm” and “ratify” the trust status of approximately 390 acres of land the Secretary of the Interior acquired in trust for benefit of the Poarch Band of Creek Indians of Alabama. The Tribe currently operates casinos regulated pursuant to the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act (25 U.S.C. 2701 et seq.) on a portion of the lands under consideration, along with a health clinic, an assisted living facility and other facilities.

The Poarch Band of Creek Indians is located approximately 56 miles north of Mobile, Alabama. The Poarch Band is a segment of the original Creek Nation which covered areas of Alabama and Georgia. After the conclusion of the War of 1812, the Creeks who supported the United States subsequently signed the Treaty of Fort Jackson which resulted in the ceding of land in Alabama. In 1836, many Creeks were removed from Alabama to the Oklahoma territory. Some Creek Indians remained around the town of Poarch, remaining a cohesive tribal group.

After fighting for decades to be recognized as a distinct tribe, the Poarch Band was administratively recognized by the Bureau of Indian Affairs on August 11, 1984. After obtaining federal recognition, the Tribe acquired lands in both Alabama and Florida, and these lands were then placed in trust by the Secretary of the Interior under the authority of section 5 of the Indian Reorganization Act (IRA, 25 U.S.C. 5108), which gives the Secretary exceptionally broad power to acquire lands in trust for Indians. Land held in trust for Indians is generally immune from State and local jurisdiction and taxation, and depending on the location of the land and the date it was put in trust, a Tribe may be able to operate a casino on it pursuant to the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act. Accordingly, the Poarch Creeks own and operate two Indian casinos and maintain several facilities for the use of its members on its trust lands.

The need for H.R. 1532 arises because the lawfulness of lands acquired in trust by the Secretary pursuant to the IRA for the benefit of tribes recognized after 1934 (i.e., the date of enactment of the IRA) is in question because of the U.S. Supreme Court decision in Carcieri v. Salazar (555 U.S. 379 (2009)). The Poarch Band is one such tribe.

Until Carcieri, the Secretary used the IRA as the basis for placing land in trust for tribes recognized at any time. However, the Supreme Court determined that trust land provisions of the IRA may be used only for the benefit of tribes “under federal jurisdiction” as of the date of enactment of the IRA. Since 2009, the Department of the Interior (DOI) has failed to divulge to the Committee the names of tribes that were or were not under federal jurisdiction in 1934 despite repeated requests for this information from Republican leaders of the Committee. Moreover, a controversial “M–Opinion” interpreting the meaning of “under federal jurisdiction” was issued by President Obama’s DOI Solicitor to provide legal backing to the continued acquisition of lands for tribes recognized after 1934. Thus, rather than work with the Committee to find a resolution to Carcieri, the Obama Administration increased the potential for litigation over the trust status of untold acres of lands owned by tribes.

The Committee has held several oversight and legislative hearings to address Carcieri and to explore potential reforms to improve the land-in-trust process administered by DOI. It is important to note that the trust acquisition authority in section 5 of the IRA has never been substantively amended since the IRA was enacted in 1934.

One of the oversight hearings held on Carcieri and the IRA includes a 2015 hearing in which the Poarch Band of Creek Indians testified as to its situation.¹ According to the Tribe, many of its lands were placed in trust prior to 2009 pursuant to the IRA, and these trust lands have been developed with the construction of buildings and businesses, including casinos. If a court were to decide these lands are not lawfully held in trust on the grounds the Poarch Band was recognized after 1934, the lands could lose their trust status, exposing the Tribe to State taxation and civil regulation, which in turn could lead to the closure of tribal businesses and the dismantling of facilities. In addition, the Tribe's casinos would become subject to Alabama State law, which could lead to the modification or closure of the gambling facilities, which employ large numbers of people and generate revenues for the Tribe's government.

Like other post-1934 tribes, passing a "clean Carcieri fix" (a reversal of the Supreme Court opinion) is a high priority of the Poarch Creeks. On the other hand, there are various governments, government organizations (including certain tribes), private land-owners, and citizen activists who oppose a "clean Carcieri fix" unless limits are placed on the power of the Secretary to acquire title to land, limits that reflect a reasonable balancing of interests of all affected by a trust acquisition. As explained by the chief legal officers of several states:

Each exercise of the Secretary's authority to take land into trust has substantial impact on state and local communities. . . .

The Carcieri decision is only one highly visible example of the larger frustration many states feel with the existing regulatory process for taking land into trust. The current process does not provide for meaningful analysis or weighing of the input of states and local units of government and is void of binding limits on the discretion of the Secretary.²

Until a bill to resolve Carcieri is enacted, certain tribes may seek to have the trust status of their existing lands legislatively ratified, especially those lands acquired prior to 2009. Accordingly, H.R. 1532 ratifies the trust status of certain lands held by the United States for the Poarch Band. The approximately 390 acres of land identified in H.R. 1532 were acquired in trust prior to the Carcieri decision in 2009, and are located in Alabama, while a one-acre parcel is located in Escambia County, Florida. The Committee has received no correspondence from the Alabama or Florida Congressional delegations or other elected officials from the affected areas in Alabama and Florida in opposition to the ratification of trust lands identified in H.R. 1532.

It is important to note that the State of Alabama was one of 21 States to submit a friend-of-the-court brief to the Supreme Court in support of the petition filed by Rhode Island in the Carcieri lawsuit. These States generally argued that the Secretary lacked power under the IRA to acquire land in trust for tribes recognized after 1934. The position of these States, including Alabama, does not necessarily indicate opposition to or concern with H.R. 1532.

It is also important to note that the Muscogee (Creek) Nation of Oklahoma has testified before the Natural Resources Committee as to concerns with a parcel of land taken in trust for the Poarch ²Letter to the Chairmen and Vice Chairman and Ranking Member of the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs and the House Natural Resources Committee from the Attorneys General of Alaska, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Hawaii, Iowa, Kansas, Massachusetts, Michigan, Mississippi, Ohio, Rhode Island, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, and Utah, dated April 24, 2009.

Band and subsequently developed by the Tribe for a gambling facility.³ The Muscogee (Creek) Nation has argued that such lands known as Hickory Ground are a sacred site containing (or formerly containing until their removal) the remains of Creek ancestors. Members of the Committee, however, have not indicated an interest in using H.R. 1532 as a vehicle to resolve this controversy between the two tribes.

House of Representatives, Washington, DC.*

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The Congressional Budget Office has prepared the enclosed cost estimate for H.R. 1532, the Poarch Band of Creek Indians Land Reaffirmation Act.

H.R. 1532—Poarch Band of Creek Indians Land Reaffirmation Act

H.R. 1532 would reaffirm the status of lands taken into trust by the Department of the Interior for the benefit of the Poarch Band of Creek Indians. The legislation also would prohibit any lawsuits related to the trust land. CBO estimates that implementing the legislation would have no significant effect on the federal budget and would not significantly increase the cost of managing tribal trust lands.

Enacting H.R. 1532 would not affect direct spending or revenues; therefore, pay-as-you-go procedures do not apply.

CBO estimates that enacting H.R. 1532 would not increase net direct spending or on-budget deficits in any of the four consecutive 10-year periods beginning in 2028.

H.R. 1532 contains no intergovernmental or private-sector mandates as defined in the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act.

The CBO staff contact for this estimate is Robert Reese. The estimate was approved by H. Samuel Papenfuss, Deputy Assistant Director for Budget Analysis.

2. General Performance Goals and Objectives. As required by clause 3(c)(4) of rule XIII, the general performance goal or objective of this bill is to reaffirm that certain land has been taken into trust for the benefit of the Poarch band of Creek Indians.
